Most shortwave stations are run as a hobby, and as such are only on the air at the weekend, mainly Sunday. A signal strength is not given, as reception conditions on the shortwave bands vary not only from day to day, but from minute to minute.

Radio Rainbow also operate on 1521kHz medium wave with 1 kW, and 95.8MHz FM stereo with 200 watts. The MW transmitter enables those listening between the groundwave and the skip area, to receive the transmissions with a good signal. Many other stations (mostly tapes from the U.K) pay to have their programmes relayed via these transmitters on a Sunday morning. Former operator of FRC Ireland, Kieren Murray has now discontinued his 'Free Radio Show' due to other commitments. His place has been taken by W.L.R. who now operate a 'free radio' programme each Sunday at 12:00. These transmitters also carry other relays on a Sunday morning, including Guernsey Sound. and Cruisin' Solid Gold.

The shortwave transmissions from Radio Dublin, are a simultaneous relay of their local service on 1188kHz medium wave and 105MHz FM.

Transmitters on various frequencies, including 6310kHz, 6318kHz, 7433kHz and 7446kHz based in the Irish Republic are used to relay the programmes of Radio Stella, WLR, Cruisin' Solid Gold and Guernsey Sound on different Sundays. Other relays have now begun to be carried.

Another transmitter, this time located in the Co. Kerry region, on 7361kHz, carries programmes from Radio 101 (a Belgian FM station) on a Sunday morning, although at times, it has been heard to relay a local FM station, most recently South West Radio. This transmitter has not been noted in operation for several months.

Radio Skywave International repeats the same one hour programme throughout Sunday morning, enabling more listeners to catch the full show, in times of poor reception. Relays are also sometimes carried via their transmitters.

Riverside Radio International also broadcast programmes from other SW stations, and quite often also transmit live relays of local Irish Independent stations.

Westside Radio International also feature relays of other stations, on most Sunday mornings. Each Sunday morning, the operator of this long established station, Prince Terry, hosts a Free Radio programme, which consists of news and letters received during the previous 7 days.

Radio Ireland International, and Radio Buttercup International have not been heard for several months.

WABC is a direct relay of the station of the same name operating in Co. Donegal, and this outlet has not been heard for some time.
